BENEDICTS-COLLEGIANS TO PLAY MONDAY EVENING

The Benedicts and Collegians will play their final game at the G. A.
Athletic Field at 5:30 next Monday afternoon. Batteries for the Benedicts will be Wilson and Robertson; Collegians, Littlehale and Bartlett. A collection will be taken to pay for balls and bats. Local fans should plan to be there as the game is the deciding one.

THE BLUE EAGLE AND THE SMALL BUSINESS

Although most of the manufacturing concerns in this locality
have shortened hours and increased wages to some extent, many of the smaller establishments have been rather slow in signing the NRA
agreement and displaying the Blue Eagle. According to a statement from the Director of the Blue Eagle Division, the requirements of individual owner-proprietors in earning the Blue Eagle are:

1. Sign the President's Reemployment Agreement.
2. Shorten hours.
3. Raise wages.
4. Don't employ child labor.
5. Cooperate with the President.

To do this:

- (a) Live up to the agreement.
- (b) Don't profiteer.
- (c) Deal only with others "under the Blue Eagle."
- (d) Get a code in.

The house-to-house canvass for NRA enrollment has not been made as yet in town, but probably will be made soon.

FORMER BETHEL MAN DROPS DEAD

Walter Yeargle, Formerly of South
Bethel, Dies Instantly on Littleton, N. H., Street

Walter Yeargle of Anthonp died
very suddenly Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 29, of cerebral hemorrhage. He was standing on the sidewalk near the Johnson jewelry store when he was seen to fall. Bystanders hastened to him and called a doctor.
Death was apparently instantaneous.

Mr. Yeargle was born in Digby, Nova Scotia, in 1867. In 1903 he married Miss Mary Lowe and they came to the United States in 1904,
making their home in different towns in Massachusetts and Maine.
Four years ago they moved to Littleton from Bethel and bought the Bridgett Velgue place on the Whitefield road. He had been engaged in the poultry business, making a specialty of turkeys.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Ethel Yeargle, three sons, Roy, Clyde and Stanley, all living at home. A quiet, home-loving man, he will be greatly missed by his family and neighbors.

The funeral was held at Bingham & Meacham's funeral parlor Thursday afternoon. Burial was in Glenwood.

$1.00 CERTIFICATES BEING SOLD FOR BETHEL FAIR

Certificates of membership in the Riverside Park Association are being offered for sale. The fee of $1.00
includes admission for the holder
and three members of his family to the postponed fair on Sept. 15
and 16, and also any event up to Oct. 1, 1933, held by the Association
on the Bethel fair grounds.

Plans are being completed for a good program on Friday and Saturday of next week and a good attendance is expected.

BETHEL GRANGE TO STAGE BIG COMMUNITY WEDDING

A committee representing Bethel Grange, headed by Elton Dalley,
met on August 23, 1933 with a representative of Universal Producing Company, Fairfield, Iowa, and made arrangements for the famous production, "Henry's Wedding," to be staged on October 26-27 in Bethel. This production is something entirely new and different in the way of entertainment and promises to be the only "Henry's Wedding" to be held in this community this year. The most outstanding thing about "Henry's Wedding" is that three couples get married, making it a triple wedding. The costuming is unusual and spectacular and the newspaper reports
throughout the entire country praise this unusual show. It takes 125 local people to present this elaborate outstanding production which promises to be the greatest social, political event and entertainment of the year. Two outstanding features of the production are the Beans and Bells of Grandma's Time and the Colored Brethren and Sisters of the Mystic Shrine. Full particulars will be given concerning these unusual entertainment features at a later time.

Indications point to "Henry's Wedding" being the high spot of entertainment in Bethel community has been the case throughout the entire country.

No one can afford to miss attending "Henry's Wedding" at the Grange Hall on October 26-27.
Watch for particulars in regard to cast and other details.

"WET" AND "DRY" CANDIDATES

With nothing on the ballot to distinguish the standing of the candidates for election as delegates to the Constitutional Convention, it will be necessary for voters to acquaint themselves as to the candidates' intentions before going to the polls. To get a representative decision of the people, there should be a large turnout next Monday,
and it is hoped that all who can
will vote, regardless of their convictions, as in many states only a fraction of the voters have availed themselves of their privilege.

"Dry" Candidates
Elmer L. Aldrich, Norway
Charles H. Holman, Dixfield
George R. Morton, Paris

"Wet" Candidates
Isabel H. Stickney, Brownfield
Ezra W. Bosworth, Fryeburg
L. M. Carroll, Norway
Fred L. Edwards, Bethel
Oliver A. Pettenueli, Rumford.

BETHEL MEN ENJOY TRIP TO "CENTURY OF PROGRESS"

Fritz and Laura Tyler, John Harrington and Parker Conner returned Monday night from a 14 days' trip to Chicago where they visited the Century of Progress Exposition. The trip was made in
Mr. Conner's car, going to Niagara Falls the first day, a distance of 590 miles, then to Detroit on Canadian soil and on to Chicago. The return trip was through Indiana, Columbus, O., through the mountains of West Virginia, Wheeling,
W. Va., and home via New York City. The mileage of the trip was 2712, which would have been considerably less if the return had been made over a more northern route.

The entire trip was made without seeing an accident and the route
included 17 states besides the District of Columbia and Canada.

Several days were spent visiting the great fair, which they report
as most instructive and entertaining, and while in Chicago they visited the wheat pit and the stockyards, and went through the Armour plant. The members of the party are very enthusiastic over their trip and according to their account the expense is within the reach of anyone who can spare the time to go.

VANS SURPRISED WHEN ENTERTAINING ON THEIR ANNIVERSARY EVE.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Van delightfully entertained a group of friends at a dinner party last Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Van had not disclosed the fact that this was their fifth wedding anniversary and were much surprised when their guests presented them with a gift in honor of the occasion. After dinner and a pleasant social hour
spent at the charming home of the host and hostess, the party drove to Locke Mills Pavilion where they attended the dance.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs.
Elmer Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cutler,
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Lord, Mr. and Mrs.
Harold Lurvey, Mrs. Grace Mac-Farlane and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene
Van.

AT THE ACADEMY

The pouring of the concrete of the first floor has been completed and the brick masons have resumed work. The granite cheeks of the front entrance steps have been set.
Plumbing work has started in the basement and the boiler at the gymnasium has been reset.

OHIO TEACHER COMING TO GOULD

Miss Ruth A. Leavengood, who will become a member of the Gould Academy faculty with the opening of the fall term next Tuesday, was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University in the class of 1926, where she majored in speech and music.
She has done graduate work at both Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio State College, having completed all work for her Master's degree except her thesis. During her year of graduate study at Ohio Wesleyan she was Fellow Assistant in Speech. She has also taught in Coshocton High School and Iowa Wesleyan College.

In addition to her teaching Miss Leavengood spent two summers
with the Redpath Chautauqua Bureau as Junior Advisor, presenting a children's pageant each week
and three summers with the Chautauqua Lyceum Platform in Play Company and Light Opera Company. She is a talented musician, both vocalist and pianist and qualified to take charge of any choral work that may be needed in connection with the school.

The following extract from a letter to Principal Hammon from Mr. R. C. Hunter, Professor of Speech and Director of Dramatics
at Ohio Wesleyan University, may serve to introduce Miss Leavengood
to patrons of Gould Academy:

"Miss Leavengood was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University
several years ago and has since
spent one year at Ohio Wesleyan, taking post-graduate work and assisting in our department. She has all the requirements for her master's degree except her thesis.

"Since leaving Ohio Wesleyan
she has taught in Coshocton High School and Iowa Wesleyan College.
At Iowa Wesleyan she made a splendid record and was forced out of her position only because of the necessity of cutting the faculty.

"I can recommend Miss Leaven-good without qualification as a young lady of fine character, extremely pleasing personality, and high scholastic attainments. I believe that she would be ideally suited to a position which involves the direction of dramatic and music activities. She is a capable teacher of speech and well qualified in the handling of dramatic work. She is also an accomplished musician,
having had a major in music at Ohio Wesleyan.

"If there is any further question
you may wish to ask about Miss Leavengood, I shall be very happy to attempt to answer it."

Very sincerely yours,
R. C. HUNTER,
(Professor of Speech and Director of Dramatics)

LABOR DAY RACES HAD TO BE CALLED OFF

Because of the slippery condition of the track after the morning
rain Monday, the races scheduled for Labor Day had to be called off.
In view of the expense involved
the sponsor of the meet has decided that it would be impractical to run
the events on any other than a holiday. Therefore all arrangements are cancelled in their entirety.

To Our Readers—If there is an old song or poem which you cannot find and would like to see in print, write the Citizen. If we are unable to locate it possibly another reader can furnish it for publication.

WHEN EARTH'S LAST PICTURE IS PAINTED

Rudyard Kipling

When Earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried,
When the oldest colors have faded, and the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and faith, we shall need it—the down for an eon or two,
Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall set us to work anew.

And those who were good will be happy; they shall sit in a golden chair;
They shall splash at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair.
They shall find real saints to draw from—Magdalene, Peter, and Paul;
They shall work for an age at a sitting and never be tired at all!
And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame,
But each for the joy of the working, and each, in his separate star, Shall draw the Thing as he sees it, for the God of Things as They are!

HAVE YOU WRITTEN TO MOTHER?

Jane Ronelson

Pray, may I ask you, worthy lad,
Whose smile in care can smother,
Though busy life throbs round about,
Have you written home to mother?

You are fast forgetting, aren't you quite,
How fast the weeks went flying;
And that a little blotted sheet,
Unanswered still is lying?

Don't you remember how she stood,
With wistful glance at parting;
Don't you remember how the tears
Were in her soft eyes starting?

Have you forgotten how her arm
Stole round you to caress you?
Have you forgotten those low words:
"Good-by, my son; God bless you?"

Oh! do not wrong her patient love;
Save God's, there is no other
So faithful through all mists of sin;
Fear not to write to mother.

Tell her how hard it is to walk
As walked the Master, lowly;
Tell her how hard it is to keep
A man's life pure and holy.

Tell her to keep the lamp of prayer,
A light, a beacon burning;
Whose beams shall reach you far away,
Shall lure your soul returning.

Tell her you love her dearly still,
For fear some sad tomorrow
Shall bear away the listening soul,
And leave you lost in sorrow.

And then, through bitter, falling tears,
And sighs you may not smother,
You will remember when too late
You did not write to mother.

IT MAY BE

S. B. Kiser

It may be that you cannot stay
To lend a friendly hand to him
Who stumbles on the slippery way,
Pressed by conditions hard and grim;
It may be that you dare not heed
His call for help, because you lack
The strength to lift him, but you need
Not push him back.

It may be that he has not won
The right to hope for your regard;
He may in folly have begun
The course that he has found so hard;
It may be that your fingers bleed,
That Fortune turns a bitter frown
Upon your efforts, but you need
Not kick him down.

A SOUVENIR

I found them in a book last night,
These withered violets:
A token of that early love
That no man ever forgets.
Pressed carefully between the leaves,
They keep their color still,
I cannot look at them today
Without an old-time thrill.

Ah me, what tricks does memory play!
The passing years have fled,
And hopes that lived in vigor once,
Alas have long been dead.
And this is all that I can say,
When all is said and done,
These flowers remind me of some girl—
I wish I knew which one!

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Sept. 3.—The forepart of the day has been middling fair. Since early noon the sky has been somewhat overcast, the cloud formations showing signs of rain.

Mr. and Mrs. Herrick Davis of Freeport were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Davis at the Davis homestead.

Mrs. Helen Poland was calling on the South Woodstock people recently in the interest of the Harvest Ingathering for the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flagg and family have moved into the Woodard Benson house. This interior has been newly papered and painted throughout.

Miss Helen Farrah, Mrs. Alura Andrews and Mrs. Florence Benson are working at the Tebbetts Mill, West Paris. This mill has many orders ahead and much extra help is now being employed.

Schools throughout our town begin today, Sept. 5. Union school will, for the eighth consecutive year, again be under the instruction of Miss Mary Hendrickson who has given undivided attention to bringing the school to a high standard of efficiency.

Mrs. Lura Thorn and daughter, Mrs. Inez Mae Ring, were calling on friends here Sept. 2, and were the donors of a beautiful bouquet of garden flowers to Mrs. Eliza Davis, an old time friend and neighbor. The gift was greatly appreciated. Mrs. Thorn has wonderful faculty in growing flowers. Somehow, under her hand, even the tiniest slip or seedling grows and flourishes, and for years many a sick or shut-in, has enjoyed the pleasure given by her remembrance of beautiful flowers.

There will be a Whitman Reunion on September 10 at Perkins Valley in South Woodstock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Perham. The Whitmans were among the earliest settlers of Woodstock being descendants of Jacob Whitman the first, whose children were Jacob the second, Reuben and Elton, Dorcas and Zilpha and others, reference to whom may be found in the records of the Whitman Genealogy. This interesting family tree has grown many branches and today the name of Whitman is known from Maine to California, as the above named Jacob the first had many brothers to carry on the Whitman lineage. One may travel toward all points of the compass and find descendants of the Whitman family who were originally English Puritans of Old England. The family tree and coat of arms has been preserved through all ages down to the present time.

From early childhood it has given me great pleasure in studying the natural beauties of hill and mountain, of woods, wild life and its mysteries. A picture of such is among our cherished memories. Therefore how eagerly we accepted the invitation of a friend to view some paintings in oil of such portrayals true to life, that for a moment it seemed you were near the river stream and actually witnessing the landing of the big fish; a pretty view of "The Three Birches" at Silver Lake; Indian Wigwams in studied relief; Labrador—a large painting showing Eskimo life; a farm scene with cows kneedee in clover; a life size picture of hunting dogs so natural we heard them bark; "Evening Prayers" a picture of two little children; and another "The Old Homestead." All a prize collection of nature studies, the pastime of a youth 76 years young, F. E. Perkins, South Andover, Me.

NEWRY

Mrs. G. F. Learned and daughter were callers Sunday at Roger Foster's.

Farmers in Charlotte, Washington County are unable to supply the local demand for quality apples. This is why—several years ago they planned to destroy their unproductive orchards. The county agent suggested fertilizing, pruning and spraying. They acted on his suggestion, hence the demand now for fruit.

Over 100 persons attended a recent canning demonstration at Grande Isle. Canning directions written in French were distributed by Leone Dakin, home demonstration agent for Aroostook County.

Edmund Smith was in New York City last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mooney and son Bradford of Portsmouth, N. H., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Head.

"By the rerouting of at least two-thirds of the money which formerly went for drink, into the buying of useful goods, a higher level of general living has been established in this country. This higher level has brought higher wages and still higher levels of living. . . . It would seem that prohibition is fundamental to our prosperity—that it is the greatest blow which has ever struck poverty." — Samuel Crowther.

Rowe Hill, Greenwood

Miss Hope Ring returned Monday to her work at C. C. G. Hospital, Lewiston, after a vacation of three weeks.

Miss Vera Dunham visited at Floyd Morgan's, South Paris, last week.

EDITORIAL

A review of the prohibition situation makes it plain that a persistent plan of publicity or "propaganda" has been in use by the "wets" (which term may include
anyone intending to vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment) since the amendment became effective some 13 years ago. It is evident that concerns manufacturing liquor would be most interested in the removal of national prohibition as there would be a natural increase in the use of their product.
When more liquor is drunk, doubtless there will be more money spent for liquor, and there will be more drunkenness. But even the "wets"
do not tell just why that will be of advantage to the country.

The numbers of deaths of enforcement officers is quoted in a news magazine as a reason for repeal. The deaths which would have occurred as the result of the consumption of legalized liquor are seldom mentioned.

HERE AND THERE IN MAINE

Three thousand attended the Summer Visitors' Day at the State Capitol last Friday. There were several noted speakers including
Henry Morganthau, Marie Peary
Stafford, Gene Tunney, and Arthur
G. Staples. Governor Brann predicts that the occasion will be repeated each year.

Thieves escaped last week after robbing a Gardner grocery store of $12, and lurching on cookies and milk in the store, while in the light of a street light which came into the building.

Frank G. Farrington Associate
Justice of the Maine Supreme Judicial Court, former speaker of the House and president of the State Senate died at his Augusta home Sunday night. He was nearly 60 years of age.

The Meserve Lumber Co. of Auburn, which has had a branch at Newry for some time, has purchased the factory and sawmill
formerly occupied by the Tubbs Sawmill Co. and will move their business there.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

After the regular scout meeting last Monday night the troop held a corn roast back of the Scoutmaster's house. During the corn-eating Howard Thurston carried off top honors, leading everyone by a wide margin.

The several clear nights lately
have enabled a number of the Scouts to pass their star tests.

In the near future the Troop
plans to go on an over-night hike
to the Greenwood Ice Caves and spend a good share of the time on Nature observation.

Albany—Waterford

W. A. Raynor of Riverside, R. I., was a caller at Ernest Brown's on Monday.

Sept. 3, South Paris lost to North Waterford 22-6 in a game of baseball at Millet's field.

of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. E.
W. Cummings of Avon Park, Fla.; Cecil Maxim, Fred Record, June and Jack Penfold of South Paris, Fred
Sturtevant of Hebron; Sarah Brown of Stoneham; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings and son of Waterford; were recent visitors at Ernest Brown's.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield McAllister
and four children, John McAllister, of Waterford, Mrs. Henry Bennett and three children of Bethel were dinner guests of Sarah Brown on Sunday.

Road work has started at Albany
under the supervision of Roy Thurston of Andover. E. S. Abbott is foreman of the construction job at N. Waterford. Many men from these and adjoining towns are finding employment at good wages.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Elliott and family are visiting relatives at Swampscott, Mass.

Stanley Lord went to New York
Saturday.

David A. McAllister and family of Harrison were in this place on Sunday.

Frank Pike and family of Conway, N. H., were in this place Sunday coming from Sweden where they attended the Nevers reunion.

Hartley Hanson's Saturday.

Ray Hanson of Errol, N. H., was calling in town Sunday.

Lawrence Holt and family of Laconia, N. H., and Rena Foster
were recent guests of Sarah Wight
and family.

Schools in town opened Tuesday
with the same teachers except at the "Head of the Tide" school. Miss Frances Lane of Errol is teaching there.

Mr. and Mrs. Killeens from Lynn, Mass., have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kilgore.

During the month of June 1933,
families in Maine received help
from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

BEER TAKES MILLIONS
FROM LEGITIMATE
INDUSTRY

"Based upon government receipts of approximately $40,000,000 for the first four months, indicating a consumption of some 8,000,000 barrels of 3.2 per cent brew for that period, it is fair to estimate that beer so far during these initial months, has taken from people's pockets and diverted from legitimate industry, not less than $320,000,000," declares a statement issued by the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation of Chicago last week.

"This diversion of well over a quarter of a billion dollars cannot help crippling proportionately
every American business in necessities and wholesome luxuries, and its effect is now becoming evident in startling fashion in the dairy products field. Fluid milk consumption on the basis of present
reports, seems likely to run several billion pounds under the 1932
record, despite the fact that, except for a slight decrease last year,
the dairy industry has maintained
a steady gain in production each year since 1924. A sustained home consumption of dairy products
even in the face of shrinking buying power of recent years has heretofore been a marked feature in that field.

"In all current economic history
it would be difficult to find a more amazing contrast than this sudden collapse of the dairy products market when compared with the steady
record-breaking gain in the demand for milk and milk products of every kind, which in twelve years, 1917
to 1929, totaled a per capita increase of 212 pounds, according to the Department of Agriculture figures as of March 5, 1930.

"On the basis of United States Census figures, the average annual family expenditure for milk and milk products has risen under 12 years of prohibitory legislation to a total of $127.50. It is this more than $3,000,000,000 retail industry in a basic necessity of life which is now threatened by the nationally unleashed beer trade, aided by all that Government prestige and official favor can do in the latter's behalf.

"Advices to the Foundation from all over the country corroborate the fact that there has been a distinct and in many cases ruinous falling off in the demand for dairy products. In Louisville, a representative city of the central states and industrial center for more than a half million people, a sudden drop in milk consumption is reported averaging more than a 7,000
pounds daily decline in demand.

"In the country at large, Wisconsin dairy markets show a minimum of 5 per cent drop in demand and sales of ice cream declined from 10 to 25 per cent, despite an unusually warm summer. Elsewhere,
prominent distributors of chocolate
milk report demand for their product cut as much as 30 per cent,
while leading buttermilk producers and dispensers, reckoning on the basis of usual demand, state confidentially that there has been a drop in their regular store and restaurant trade of from 10 to 15 per cent.

From apartment homes deliveries
have dropped in many cases.

"The president of one of the most prominent dairy companies of Michigan declares, 'I expect to find that most dairy companies have experienced just what was experienced in Louisville.'

"Mr. W. A. Gordon, editor of the Dairy Record of St. Paul, Minnesota, adds to this discussion:

"Fluid milk consumption is reported as being from seven to fifteen per cent below last year,
butter is down as high as 15
per cent in some metropolitan centers and ice-cream continues to report sub-par figures. Only cheese gives any indication of anything like normal consumption, and this by virtue of its partnership with beer."

"In the light of beer's diversion of upwards of $300,000,000 from legitimate trade and its manifest crippling of the market for the great majority of dairy products,
this possible acceleration of the cheese market, scarcely 10 per cent of the production in that field, is far more costly than beneficial."

WHAT IS BEHIND THE REPEAL DRIVE?

Dr. Thomas Nixon Carver, distinguished head of the Department of Political Economy in Harvard University, in a personal letter written
O. J. McClure and received by him
May 28, 1933, and which Dr. Carver specifically authorized, says:

"We are fighting a business which makes money every time a non-drinker is made into a drinker,
and a moderate drinker into a hard drinker. So long as powerful financial interests are in a position to make money by extending the drink habit they will use every resource at their command to accomplish that purpose. They will employ the most skillful salesmen
and advertisers, they will adopt every lure and every device known to modern psychology to popularize drink and increase drinking.
They will organize a campaign for intemperance.

"They who are in favor of that business will, of course, vote wet.
They who are opposed to that business should think twice before voting to license it to start its campaign of education for intemperance."

Millions of stay-at-home voters
who really do not want to see America delivered over to the organized liquor traffic are responsible for the wet vote cast in many states to date according to reliable observers. They say they do not drink but they are by their lethargy
and indifference allying themselves with the enemies of sobriety and order.—W. C. T. U.

Princess Caravita, formerly Miss Janet Snowden, and step-daughter of Commander Walter Sherman Davidson, was under guard by the sheriff's department of Androscoggin County at Poland Springs several days recently because of threatening letters which had been received. The Princess is the recent bride of Prince Di Strignavo and is seeking annulment of the marriage.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

(By REV. GEORGE HENRY)

THE MIND OF CHRIST

"Let this mind be in you that was also in Jesus Christ." Thus the Apostle Paul to the Philippians. His appeal is to the intellect rather than to the emotions. Let emotion have its rightful place, but let the mind and higher levels. What was in the mind of Christ, a thought of entire devotion to the world and will of God, a thought that centered in the interests of men in the world to come; a thought of the unity of His people. There are many other thoughts expressed by Christ while He was here upon earth and recorded by His Apostles after He went away, but these thoughts seem to have been uppermost. Suppose our minds were to dwell more persistently upon God's word and will; suppose we considered the material world no less, but the world of spirit more; suppose we thought only and talked of the spirit that tends to unify? God give us the mind of Christ.

THE STORY OF THE CAMEL

Friends of liquor insist that while they want liquor back they do not want the saloon back. They do not mean it. The saloon may be coming back. If anything the new saloon will be worse than the old one was. Liquor will not be content with any half way measure. It will go all the way. The situation reminds one of the story of the camel and the master. The master had pitched his tent for the night and retired. The camel laid down outside the tent. As the night air was cold the camel put his head in the tent. When the master remonstrated the camel plead to be allowed just to keep his head in the tent. The master finally consented. Soon the camel had his fore feet in the tent. The master remonstrated and the camel plead that it was cold and he merely wanted to remain a little while to get warm. The master permitted him to remain. The next move the camel made was to draw in his hind legs and shove the master out of the tent. Liquor and the saloon are going to do just that way. The situation is going to become worse than it was before prohibition came, and some years from now we will see the people waking up and demanding prohibition again. The history of the human race as far back as any record extends has been a series of blunderings off and then back on to the straight and narrow way.

NORMA KNIGHT

Anyhow, Mrs. Ensloe concluded, she had been popular with girls ever since he put on long trousers. I'm surprised you don't like him."

"Did he say I don't like him?" Cynthia, I'd really enjoy shaking him. For two cents I'd do it, too. I ought to know Geoff well enough to realize he wouldn't come to complain to me whatever you say. Those first letters of his were reports of border warfare. He hasn't mentioned you at Cynthia's presumable pleasure at the omission was skillfully concealed. Mrs. Ensloe herself knew the comment of triumph at the expression of dismay which spread over the girl's face. "Aha, young lady! It irks you a bit, doesn't it?"

He let the subject drop for the time being, but Cynthia soon discovered that Geoff's mother was conducting an active—no less active—campaign in Geoff's behalf.

The girl early learned that she was a skilled opponent. Mrs. Ensloe's quiet comments which stabbed at her complacency, the wordless effective manner she had of finding the difficult position which had been Geoff's in this household, all and harder to bear than anything else, her air of pity for her goddaughter because of her mess toward Geoff's real character, kept Cynthia awake for many a night in her lively if anxious interest in the young man whose mother viewed with satisfaction.

CHAPTER XII

Changes.

NE morning the Captain failed to appear at breakfast, and Mrs. Ensloe, going anxiously to his room to ascertain the reason, came back with a troubled face.

"He says he's not ill, just tired," she reported. "I think I'll call Doctor Bigham, just to be on the safe side."

Call me after he's been here and let me what he says," Cynthia said.

It was Mrs. Ensloe who gave the best report.

"I'm afraid your grandfather is very ill, Cynthia," she said. "It's heart, the doctor says."

Seriously ill, Mrs. Ensloe? "I'm afraid so, my dear. Doctor Bigham wants a nurse."

Oh, he must be ill! Is he in bed?"

No. But the doctor seems to think there's a dropsical condition. She could hear Cynthia's gasp at the other end of the line. "There's immediate danger. No need for me to come home."

Cynthia did come home at last. She knew how much Miss Ensloe would need support at this time. The nurse had arrived by the time Cynthia came. Save for her presence in the house, it did seem like an illness. The Captain smiled at his daughter, had a word for Geoff and Cynthia, and on a previous occasion Doctor Bigham threw Geoff aside, and here! The old man's going days—

"Few nothing," was Cary's derisive comment. "When you get to New York and spruce up with a lot of new clothes you'll look like a sixteen-year-old. Besides, think of Cynthia! I'll put her squarely on her feet for the first time since she left college."

Cynthia herself opposed the plan violently. She honestly believed that her mother's health never robust, would be seriously affected if she left the old house. That she herself would benefit by the sale only strengthened her opposition. At the same time she had a feeling of balloons tugging at her heart. To be free of those harassing debts!

"Geoff could move into that nice quiet hotel near the laboratory," Mrs. Ensloe said brightly. "It's only four months' bill he'll be leaving

After that Geoff spent most of the night going quietly to the Captain's door to open it a crack and peer in, to receive the nurse's reassuring nod and slip back to bed where he dozed for an hour or two only to repeat his visit of inquiry.

Day after day went by, and there was no change in the patient. Miss Nona and Mrs. Ensloe cared for him in the daytime, the nurse at night. Cynthia came and went as usual from the shop. Cary came in each evening to sit with his grandfather, and Flossie proved to be of unexpected value in helping with the nursing.

They were all at dinner one evening, Flossie and Cary, too. Suddenly the nurse's voice was heard calling from upstairs.

"Mrs. Aylesbury! Mr. Ensloe!" They raced up the stairs, Cary with his arm about his mother, Geoff stretching out his hand to Cynthia. The Captain was gone. He lay serenely on his pillows, so little changed by death that his daughter could not believe he had spoken to her for the last time.

Miss Nona dropped sadly after the funeral. At last Doctor Bigham called Mrs. Ensloe aside for a talk, at the conclusion of which she announced briskly that she was returning to New York and taking her friend with her.

"You've been promising me a visit for 25 years, Nona," she said. "Now you're going to pay it."

"But Cynthia!" Miss Nona asked. It was plain that the plan lured her. She needed a change and she had always loved being with Bingham. "What could I do with Cynthia and Tenny? They can't stay here alone with Geoff unless they have a chaperon."

For a time it seemed as though that obstacle could not be overcome. It was Doctor Bigham who found the solution.

"Look here," he said one evening when he had dropped in for a friendly call. "Why on earth do you folks keep this big house? I happen to know that an apartment house company would be glad to buy it—house, garden and all. Let Cynthia and Tenny take an apartment for themselves for the rest of the winter."

Cary seized on the idea with avidity. "Cynthia could pay off all those old bills that have been worrying her, and Miss Nona would have a tidy sum left. The doctor's scheme sounds like good sense to me, Miss Nona!"

It needed a great deal of persuasion to convince the legal owner of the house of the wisdom of such a course. She had been born here, she had been married here, both of her children had opened their eyes in her bedroom upstairs. Her husband, her mother and her father had died in this house. She wanted only to be allowed to spend her few remaining days—

"Few nothing," was Cary's derisive comment. "When you get to New York and spruce up with a lot of new clothes you'll look like a sixteen-year-old. Besides, think of Cynthia! I'll put her squarely on her feet for the first time since she left college."

Cynthia herself opposed the plan violently. She honestly believed that her mother's health never robust, would be seriously affected if she left the old house. That she herself would benefit by the sale only strengthened her opposition. At the same time she had a feeling of balloons tugging at her heart. To be free of those harassing debts!

"Geoff could move into that nice quiet hotel near the laboratory," Mrs. Ensloe said brightly. "It's only four months' bill he'll be leaving Denver anyway." She slid her glance toward Cynthia's face as she spoke and was surprised to see the steady light in which dawned on it.

Flossie, too, pushed the sale. She felt that when the last link was cut between Cary and his home she would be surer of him. "Our first wife" gave signs of being in earnest about her present situation.

"You're all against me," Miss Nona said mournfully. "There's only one thing I ask, let me get away with Eunice before a book is packed or a room disturbed. I want to remember my home as it was, not all torn up and dismantled."

So Cynthia and Geoff, with Cary, saw the two women off to New York.

"Where are you?" Geoff demanded one afternoon, coming home early that he might help with the work.

A faint halloo from the attic informed him of Cynthia's whereabouts. He found her sitting on a three-legged stool before an open trunk, poring over a gray-leaved kodak book.

"My father gave it to me on my eighth birthday," she said. "Look—here he is! I used a whole roll of film on him before I learned to focus. And here's Miss Nona, and here's Cary in his first long trousers, and here's the Captain—"

He took it from her and turned its pages with eager interest. Here were dozens of Cynthia's; Cynthia in pleated skirt and white sweater, leading an English bulldog on a leash; Cynthia in riding costume astride a pony; Cynthia with Cary, his arm thrown protectively about her shoulders; Cynthia in her graduating frock, all frills and with an armful of roses; Cynthia, Cynthia, Cynthia—repeated over a range of an entire decade.

There was one little picture that wedged its way right down into a corner of Geoff's heart and stayed there. It was a very small Cynthia indeed—taken before the birthday camera had been given, and pasted in the book by Miss Nona. She was sitting on one of the looms, her small feet stuck out straight before her. The seriousness of the occasion had evidently been impressed upon her for she wore an expression of deep gravity. Curled round her small head, short curls, silky curls they looked to be. Her small arms were bare, her brief frock showed bare knees and shoulders. Altogether she was the most beguiling bit of babyhood that ever sat for a picture which would eventually meet a lover's eye. Surprisingly Geoff slipped it out of the strips which held it. When Cynthia's head was turned he put it carefully away in his pocket.

"If I only knew what to do with all these things," she mourned. "Here's a trunk full of the Captain's wedding clothes, striped trousers, huge satin tie, high silk hat and all. These piles of Leslie's Weekly go back to the Spanish-American war. I hate to burn them or sell them to the rag man, here's the saddle I had for my Shetland pony—his name was Carnation Perfume because I thought that was the only name nice enough for him. Cary called him Tarnation. That box over there is full of things Dad and Miss Nona brought from the World's fair at Chicago; spun glass and shells from Bermuda and a blown ostrich egg—all sorts of trash that have memories attached to them."

"What doesn't?" Geoff asked sensibly. "If I were you I'd pack one box with useless souvenirs and throw the rest away."

The work proceeded slowly despite the number of willing hands. Tenny was in her glory, dragging out old silk dresses with bustles and ruffled trains, resending Cynthia's biggest doll from Cary's devastating hand, scattering the books Cynthia had sorted, generally behaving, as Geoff told her good-naturedly, as though she were six pairs of twins and a single.

It was their last night in the old Cary house. The rooms were stripped and bare, only enough furniture remained for their actual needs. Geoff's belongings had already been sent to the hotel where he was to stay during the remainder of his time in Denver. Cynthia had found and furnished from their own beautiful old pieces a five-room apartment which was not too far from Tenny's school.

"Look here, Marguerite," Geoff had said that morning, "this is my last day here and I'm going to run the housekeeper again, at least as far as dinner is concerned. Just disregard any orders Miss Cynthia may give you, and you and I'll plan a meal that is a meal."

So tonight, to Cynthia's surprise, they sat down to delicately broiled chicken to artichokes and white cherries in aspic, to pink rosebud loes and cake.

"What on earth?" she demanded. "So that my last meal here might be as much like my first as possible," he explained. "I wasn't sure about the details but Marguerite remembered."

"That was the day Dadji was killed," Cynthia recalled soberly. "That was the day you started hating me," said Geoff.

"Do you hate him, Cynthia? Oh, why? I love Geoff!"

"That's right, Tenny. You keep on setting Cynthia a good example and maybe she'll follow it."

"At least," Cynthia told him softly. "I've got past the hating point. I'll even admit this: I'm going to miss you terribly after today, Cary. I suppose you and Flossie—"

"We're going to take some things over to our apartment," Cary interrupted importantly. "This girl of mine has set her heart on hoarding all sorts of my youthful possessions. I'll have to see the janitor about storing them."

Flossie smiled. "Our first wife" had intimated in a tongue-in-cheek conversation with her that day that after next month no more alimony would be expected.

Tenny was a long time getting to sleep that night. It was thrilling, in the first place, to go to bed in a room which contained a bed and nothing else; not a rug, not a chair, not a picture on the walls. He meant over the next day's move contributed to her wakefulness. But finally the white light dropped and Tenny, her head tucked beneath her cheek, was wrapped in slumber.

Geoff came down from a short trip to the attic and found Cynthia in the old parlor. She had not turned on the lights but the shades were up and moonlight streamed in from the windows. Geoff saw that she was crying as he entered the room to her.

"Why, Cynthia? Why, my dear?" "Yes, I know," she said brokenly. "But it's parting with all I know of permanency and security and—home! No other place will ever be the same to me. I understand now how Miss Nona felt."

"Cynthia," Geoff said gently, "will you let me make you at home, dear?"

There was a sudden silence and then she said: "Are you asking me to marry you, Geoff?"

"Yes, my darling."

"Geoff . . . I'm sorry . . . I—I can't."

"You don't love me, Cynthia?"

"No." She shook her head and the movement displaced the bright drops which brimmed her eyes. "I'm fond of you—truly I am." She laughed a little tearfully. "That's more than I ever thought I'd be able to say, Geoff. I like you better than any man I know, Geoff, but it isn't enough. I told you once—"

"I know," he said. "But it's a great deal that you feel that way about me. Thank you, Cynthia!"

He bent his head to kiss the eyelids he held and quite simply she offered him her lips. Instantly she was swept into his arms, held in an embrace that smothered her. She struggled to free herself, realized the futility and relaxed in his arms.

"I'm sorry, Cynthia," he said, releasing her. "So, I'm d-d if I am! I have that to remember, anyhow."

"I'm not angry, Geoff. I'd give you—more, if I could." She slipped quickly from the room and stood before the window for a long time, staring out at the moonlit garden.

The next morning it was bustle and confusion. Cynthia, to her own annoyance, that it was she instead of Geoff who finished and averted her eyes when they met at the breakfast table. Geoff was his usual cheerful kindly self. The secret, however, never had occurred to him.

Somehow she resented his self-control. She became very business-like.

"See that the men are careful with a box marked 'Fragile,' Cary! Marguerite, are you sure you have the kitchen things all in one packing box? Geoff, here's a book of yours I found in Miss Nona's room."

"I'm coming around to take you

two . . . dinner tonight," he said easily.

"Geoff, we can't possibly—"

"I know it. You can't possibly eat the right kind of meal in all that disorder. That's why I'm calling for you at six sharp. Tenny, will you see that Cynthia has her hat on?"

The movers were out of the house. Nothing remained but to lock the doors and go. Cynthia was startled to hear Geoff's light steps rattling down the front stairs. She had thought he had driven away before the last wagon.

"Give me that," he said, holding out his hand for the key. "Hop in my car—it's parked pretty far down the block on account of all the wagons—and wait for me there. No need for you to watch the curtain go down."

A girl's perversity made her attitude to the subject she had determined to avoid. "I'm so sorry about last night," she said and then could have bitten her tongue with chagrin at her own tactlessness.

Again Geoff did the unexpected. He put his hands on her shoulders, bent his head to look into her eyes. "Cynthia, something tells me that you're going to love me . . . love me the way you said you'd have to love the man you marry. Sweet, I want you to promise me something. Promise that if—that when you feel that way toward me, you'll let me know."

A flash of her old hostility returned.

"You're very sure of yourself, Geoff. And sure of me, too, aren't you? I suppose you base your belief on the fact that you've always been what your mother described as 'popular with girls'?"

He gave the slender shoulders he held a little shake. "I suppose on our way up the aisle you'll stop to say something hateful to me," he told her. "Never mind! I never could stand those silly sweet girls with lovely dispositions!"

CHAPTER XIII

Flossie Gives Advice.

AFTER the excitement of moving and settling in the new apartment, Cynthia found that she had decided, Valentine day, with its spirit of trade, passed and only an occasional corner invaded the quiet of the shop. Flossie took frequent afternoons off now and offered to relieve Cynthia in turn; but there was no particular place she desired to go.

"Get some new clothes," Flossie advised. "That's always interesting."

Match was inserted in with a buzzard that raved all day. Tenny was not allowed to go to school and Marguerite had "neuritis" in her face and was cross. Cynthia tramped to and from the shop the milk collar of her coat turned up against the stinging wind and short, her feet cold in their slippers. Life was drab and uninteresting.

It gained no color from the fact that Geoff was being much sought in a social way since he left the Cary house. The hotel in which he lived was known as "The Bachelor's Hive" and was run in conjunction with a club which gave exclusive and rather amusing parties. Echoes of Geoff's participation in them reached Cynthia now and then.

Once two girls came in looking for a particular kind of Beanoes brass work which could be obtained only at the Odds and Ends. They were almost too deeply occupied in chatter about a dance they had attended the night before to give heed to their purchases.

"I noticed you kept the new man pretty well to yourself," one accused the other warmly. "Rather a pig, wasn't he?"

"You keep away from Geoff," the other answered. "He's a duck and a deer, and I don't care who hears me say so! Did you know he's going back to New York in June to be president of that Enloe company that Dad's trying to get back into?"

"He'll go?"

"Not! What he doesn't say about himself would fill many large libraries."

"What does he talk about then? I notice he's able to keep you interested."

"Oh—me," was the demure answer. "I could listen for hours to his flow of language on that subject."

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor

11.00 Morning Worship. The Pastor will take as his subject, Rum and Ruin vs. Reason and Respectability.

On Monday, next the citizens of Bethel will have the opportunity to show which group they are traveling with.

I know full well that many good (though I feel misguided) citizens will vote to repeal the 18th amendment; but when they enter the voting booth to mark their ballots I hope they will close their eyes and mentally take a good look at some of the people with whom they are standing.

It will surely be the crowd that they mix with upon no other occasions, and it would be difficult to find any other question of public interest upon which they would be in accord.

DUDLEY—KNIGHTS

A very pretty wedding took place August 28, on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cole, North Woodstock, when their daughter, Miss Alice Mae Knights became the wife of Otis Dana Dudley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana O. Dudley. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. A. Edwards of Bethel, under a rustic arch decorated with a pink wedding bell, white flowers, and background of fir trees.

The bride's attendants were: maid of honor, Evelyn M. Knights, sister of the bride; bridesmaid, Miss Barbara Cole of South Weymouth, Mass., a cousin of the bride; flower girls, Frances Sweetser and Joyce Cole; ring bearer, Richard Cole, brother of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her step-father, Herman C. Cole.

The bride wore white chiffon and a veil and carried a bouquet of pink and white asters. The attendants were dressed in pastel shades and carried bouquets of mixed flowers.

The ring bearer wore a white suit. The groom was attended by his brother-in-law, Leroy Ervin.

The bride's mother was dressed in blue silk and wore a corsage of sweet peas. Robert Parker of Salem, Mass., sang a solo, "O Promise Me." The wedding march was played by Mrs. Alpheus Coffin. A wedding supper was served. The color scheme was pink, white and green.

There were 75 guests present.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, Salem, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cole, Barbara and Monroe Cole of South Weymouth, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Dwinalls of Kennebunkport; Mrs. Fannie Cummings and Ernest Smith of West Paris.

There was a reception at eight o'clock in the Grange Hall, Bryant Pond. In the receiving line were the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Dudley, and Leroy Ervin.

The following entertainment was enjoyed:

Solo, Robert Parker, Salem, Mass.
